Says Flyers Learn Stunts In Eight Hours or Never

Difficult as stunt flying appears to the uninitiated, all the tricks at command of the dare-devil aviator can be learned in seven or eight hours, or not at all, the War Department announced yesterday.

An official statement describing work done at thirty aviation schools shows that only a few have the necessary "stuff" to become stunt aviators. Stunts form a sort of post-graduate course at the flying schools, and instructors soon find whether or not a man has the necessary qualifications, the report says.

Practically all the aces in all the flying squadrons know every stunt in the trick book, the report adds.
